What's new in Crisis Wing:

The "Crisis Wing" () is the emergency military force unit in the Swiss Armed Forces (Armeeoberwacht). They are tasked with missions such as force protection of the Swiss armed forces, to conduct emergency evacuations and humanitarian relief operations, as well as protect Swiss national territory against possible attack. The unit's personnel is fully trained in civil emergency response techniques (Gemeinsame Ausbildung zur Maßnahmeplanung in Not - GZMN, ch. 378), and professional expertise, as well as a sense of duty and discipline, is an essential operational requirement. The Crisis Wing mainly consists of members of six medical companies: mobile medical companies, medical companies, medical companies, medical companies, and a medical company, to provide care for troops, civilians, and Swiss citizens. The four squadrons are in part called H - Hubertus, E - Einsatz, F - Flucht, and G - Geschwader. These six medical companies are all the "Crisis Wing" squadrons that come into the same 'geopolitical assignment' area and get the same "overall command" (usually a Colonel in Staff reserve). These squadrons can be directly tied to a deployed Field Unit, but a gap between the two can be made up by the

Crisis Wing HQ. The Crisis Wing consists of: two operational squadrons: H and G two squadrons assigned to deployed field units The total strength is: 1,093 officers and NCOs (601 soldiers and 494 of them are specialists). The Crisis Wing is trained and equipped to perform direct military support at any date. The Crisis Wing can be deployed in armed conflict to a degree. Equipment While the Crisis Wing's combat boots have been worn for the last 100 years, this has never been of war nature. All Crisis Wing units are equipped with four types of vehicles - GAS, all types of Katlas and Stägge/Blimister in varying degrees. In each unit, the GAS vehicles are concentrated on one platoon and can be checked by a Master of GAS (MoG) on site. During the development of the Swiss Armed Forces, most Crisis Wing units were equipped with R 14 and licensed military vehicles. The Crisis Wing now uses the German licence plate of their parent units. See also Freibaugleichtechnik J
