. Inc., and a partial business development agreement with the FedEx Corp. “Currently, we have a solid balance sheet and plenty of cash, which we can use to invest in new technologies, acquire businesses, and enter into strategic partnerships that will accelerate our growth,” Christopher M. Meek, the co-chief executive and co-chief financial officer at Oak State, said in a statement. According to a regulatory filing, the companies said the business development agreement will be made up of cash and shares of newly formed FedEx Express Ventures Ltd. The shares will be offered to existing shareholders for $1.50 each. On Feb. 12, FedEx Corp. said it will buy the house ware and package delivery business of fellow Kmart Corp.-owned retailer Access Transportation Inc. in an all-cash deal of $1.39 billion. The transaction, which includes 100 Access locations and $335 million in debt, will boost FedEx’s enterprise volume and revenue. “The acquisition of Access is a fitting merger of complementary businesses and will lead to new synergies that will benefit FedEx customers,” FedEx said in a statement. The Kmart agreement highlights the chain’s efforts to cut costs and become more aggressive with acquisitions, in addition to its more than $1.5 billion acquisition last year of Weslock Business Products Inc., a maker of home office products. Doug Stephens, president and chief executive at Kmart, said on a call with analysts that the Access deal will free up $200 million in funds to be used for “high-impact projects” at the company. He added that that $200 million would be “in addition to the $1.5 billion invested in our business.” Kmart had net income of $268 million last year on $14.6 billion in sales. The deal includes 100 Access operations in the U.S. and Canada, including 91 Kmart stores, 11 Kmart superstores and 11 Kmart furniture stores. Access had about 1,600 employees at the time of the deal, the company said. In the first half of fiscal 2018, Access generated sales of $560 million, compared with $582 million in fiscal 2017. It also posted a net loss of $174 million, compared with a loss of $74.3 million in the same period a year ago. When Access started operations in 1995, it was the third such business owned by K

Q: Error loading web.config connection string in ASP.NET web app I've built a web app using C# and ASP.NET. It's time to put it online and have it connected to a database in a company network, so I created a new ASP.NET 2.0 web site in Visual Studio. The site project was built and I added it to the IIS site, but when I try to load the site in a browser I get the following error: Error loading web.config connection string... The ASP.NET site project builds and runs fine, but when I try to load a page in the browser it gives me the above error and I can't figure out why. It doesn't make any difference if I add a reference to a Class Library project in the project that is trying to run the site or not. It's always the same. The web.config file has this connection string: The web.config file is in the GISDB folder where the web app is running (and where the Class Library projects are stored). The web site was configured to use .net 2.0. Any suggestions? A: Turned out that it had something to do with the fact that I had installed Oracle 11g as the customer wanted to use a database that was compatible with their older software. Once I removed the Oracle 11g installation, the problem was solved. Since this was an internal development environment, I had no reason not to install the Oracle 11g and was surprised that it caused the connection string error. The effect of naturally occurring estrogens and tamoxifen on the induction of antigen-specific IgE antibody production in vivo. The role of naturally occurring estrogen in regulating Ag-specific IgE production has been investigated. In vivo modulation of IgE secretion was observed by subcutaneously (s.c.) injecting BALB/c mice with estradiol (E2) or control vehicle, either before or after immunization with ovalbumin (OVA). E2 induced a significant (P
